In every clash with the enemy during the combined Vietnamese-American operations, the 11th Armored Cavalry always gained the initiative on the battlefield and made maximum use of its tactical superiority to nullify the enemy reactions, inflicting defeat upon them on every field. Most notably, during the period of its military operations on Cambodian territory, from 1 May to 28 June 1970, the 11th Armored Cavalry achieved many victories. These victories not only inflicted heavy personnel casualties and weapons losses upon the enemy, but also undermined the fighting spirit of Communist units in South Vietnam since they effectively prevented all strength replenishment and reinforcement and neutralized the Communists' key command organizations hitherto operating from large, safe bases on Cambodian territory.
